was operatin' at that particular time, that's the appearance that Gastonia had to me at that particular time, because I was a real young boy whenever Gastonia looked somethin' similar to that.

INT: Now this happened on Labor Day in 19-- WRIGHT: '34?
INT: If you went downtown, tell us about it see if you -- did you see this parade?
WRIGHT: One -- one particular time I was in Gastonia when we havin' the parade. Ah, they had a big parade, but they was more people viewin' it from the sidewalks then they were in the parade. In other words, there was a pretty good group of people in that parade that I saw when I's up there, but they was so many people on the sidewalks viewin' the parade you couldn't -- you couldn't get through the sidewalks. You had to just stand still to -- to see it, because you couldn't move on the sidewalks. People that wasn't used to parades in that particular area, because, you know, they had public appearance laws that kindly helt the crowds back. In other words, the city had a little old city laws that prevented people from gatherin' too much in too big a crowd due to fire hazards. You know, they claimed that they didn't have fire
